

PART 1 READING ALOUD

Your social club recently held a games afternoon. Your teacher has asked you to give a talk informing your class at school about it. This is what you say.

Hello everyone. Do you enjoy taking part in team games? Not everyone does, I know. But they can actually be good fun, as I found out last week.

My local social club was holding a games afternoon for young people in the area, and I went along for the first time with a couple of friends, just to see if there was anyone there that we knew. When we arrived in the community hall, we immediately recognised some students from school, and went over to them.

'Welcome to the club! Have you been here before?' said one of them with a wide, happy smile.

'No, we haven't,' replied my friend Yi Ling. 'I didn't know it existed until Jia Wen told me about it.'

'You've picked a good day to come along. These games sessions are really popular and you're going to enjoy yourselves a lot!'

A few minutes later, we were introduced to some people we hadn't met before, and everyone was asked to get into teams of four. I found myself with some really friendly girls, and we had a great time running around and laughing, trying to beat the other teams at some very silly games.

The afternoon passed by in a flash. Maybe we could hold a games session here after school one day?

PART 2 SPOKEN INTERACTION

This video shows students playing team games in a sports hall.

You will not be asked any questions about what people say.
